TOM JOHNSON AFTER AN INDORSEMENT

For U. S. Senator At Ohio Democratic Nominating Convention May Upset Harmony Program

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
Dayton, O., June 21.—Confident of victory in the fall elections and with their enthusiasm given added force by the belief that their standard-bearer in the campaign about to begin will be the Presidential candidate two years hence, the Democratic hosts of Ohio have rallied here in force for the State nominating convention. The committee meets in Memorial hall this evening to organize by the appointment of the necessary committees and to listen to the opening addresses. The work will be completed tomorrow by the nomination of a State ticket and the adoption of a platform.

Governor Hudson Harmon will be renominated by acclamation. No other name will be presented for the head of the ticket. Contests are in prospect for the nominations for lieutenant governor and State treasurer, but the general belief is that when the convention gets down to work a slide approved by Governor Harmon will be put through without much difficulty.

One of the subjects with which the convention has to deal and the only one apparently which threatens to interfere with the general harmony of the gathering is the question of endorsing a candidate for United States senator. The proposal to endorse a senatorial candidate was approved by William J. Bryan, who some time ago wrote a letter attacking Governor Harmon for his opposition to the suggestion. Mr. Bryan has always had a large following among Ohio Democrats, but in his demand that they nominate a candidate for the senate in their State convention he has found little support. Nevertheless, a fight on the question in convention is already clearly outlined and it may not be an easy matter to defeat the resolution.

Many of the Democratic leaders believe Mr. Bryan was indicted to make his demand upon Governor Harmon by Tom L. Johnson of Cleveland. Nearly two months ago Johnson declared his intention of offering a resolution in the State convention that the convention proceed to the nomination of a candidate for the senate. The former mayor of Cleveland is a delegate to the convention and will have about one hundred of the eleven hundred delegates in it under his control.

CHIEF APPELEY BACK FROM INDIANAPOLIS

Head of Greatest Insane Asylum and Chief of Splendid Department Made Him Very Welcome.

Chief of Police George M. Appley who left for Indianapolis Sunday morning with an inmate of the Central Indiana Hospital for the Insane who escaped on the 6th of May and after wandering through Iowa turned up in Janesville Saturday night, returned home last evening with the happiest recollections of his hospital hospital. Dr. George F. Edelbacher, who has been superintendent of the great institution located five miles from the metropolis for seventeen years, and Mr. Myers, financial secretary for an equal period, not only took delight in entertaining the Janesville officer and showing him through every part of an institution which has an average of 2,000 patients enrolled, but the first named also sent for Martin J. Hyland who was elected superintendent of the Indianapolis police department last January and had him show Chief Appley all the workings of his department. Between inspections, the four dined together in the private quarters of the asylum superintendent, upon the latter's invitation.

The asylum, which is said to be the largest of its kind in the world, has at present 1,829 inmates, of which number 1,500 are women. Chief Appley witnessed the remarkable spectacle of this great assemblage of women inmates filing at one time into a dining room which seemed to stretch away almost as far as the eye could reach. For the institution has a floor space of 17 acres and the corridor on one building is a mile in length. Three hundred and forty employees are required to attend to the inmates and the cost of running the asylum totals $225,000 per annum.

The buildings are surrounded by 57 acres of park with beautiful drives and walks, fountains and flowers.

Supt. Edelbacher recalled the fact that he and several members of the state board were in Janesville last winter while on their tour of inspection in Wisconsin, and he told Chief Appley that Rock county had one of the finest, cleanest institutions of the kind he had ever visited. And he said the highest tribute to Supt. and Mrs. Barlow.

Indianapolis now has a population of 240,000 of which number 35,000 are colored. Saloons number 800. There are 310 police officers—32 of them detectives; 16 mounted on bicycles; 2 mounted on motorcycles; and 2 horses. In addition to three automobile patrols and three horse patrols, a machine called the "riot auto" is held in readiness for serious emergencies. The force works from one central and four sub stations.

The photograph cabinet contains 5,000 pictures of criminals and some of the Wisconsin crooks in the gallery. Mr. Hyland had been in the service, working up from patrolman to sergeant, for 27 years at the time he was chosen as superintendent. He devoted all the evening until 10 o'clock to showing and explaining to Chief Appley the various phases of the work carried on by his men.

Chief Appley was pleased to note that nearly all of the streets were of asphalt and unusually wide, on one of the great squares is the magnificent Soldiers and Sailors' monument with its mammoth illuminated fountain—a magnificent structure costing over a million dollars and paid for by the state.

LAD IS SLIGHTLY INJURED BY AUTO

Harold Smith, Ten Year Old Son of Eugene Smith of La Prairie, Knocked Down on Milwaukee Street.

Harold Smith, the ten year old son of Eugene S. Smith of the town of La Prairie was struck by an automobile owned by Al. Toubert, shortly before three o'clock this afternoon and slightly injured. The lad, who had just been released from the witness stand in the case of Smith vs. Toubert in the Justice Tullman's court, was running across the west end of the Milwaukee street bridge when the accident occurred. Toubert, who was driving very slowly, did not see the boy until it was too late, as he ran into the front wheel from behind a sprinkling wagon. Although dashed to the pavement with considerable violence, the boy was unhurt save for a bruise on his right arm and the shock. He was carried to Smith's pharmacy and Dr. Mills and Sutherland called to attend him. It is not thought that his injuries are serious. The fact that the automobile was being driven slowly at the time undoubtedly saved the boy from serious hurt. As it was, he was only thrown to the pavement and the wheels did not pass over his body.

Wisconsin to make fight for reduced express rates. Attorney Walter Drew of Madison, who is heading the fight inaugurated by the Merchants and Manufacturers' association of Milwaukee.

Madison, Wis.—Wisconsin is making a determined fight to lower express rates in the state on an average of 25 per cent. The Merchants and Manufacturers' association of Milwaukee recently retained Walter Drew of Madison, an expert statistician and lawyer, who for the past seven years has been retained by Senator R. M. La Follette to compile such data, to make an examination.

The examination showed rates to be so high that a complaint to adjust them has been filed with the Wisconsin railroad commission and later one will be filed with the Interstate commerce commission.

It was shown that the express rates of Wells, Fargo & Co., and of the American National and United States Express companies in Wisconsin are higher than rates for like distances in Iowa, by from 7 to 50 per cent; in Nebraska, by 31 to 60 per cent; in Virginia, by 31 per cent on the average; in Georgia, by 28 per cent on the average; in North Carolina, by 17 to 100 per cent; in Texas, by 7 to 60 per cent; in Missouri, by 28 per cent on the average; and higher than rates issued by the state commissions in New Hampshire and Oklahoma by 6 to 60 per cent.

The highest officials and attorneys of the various companies of New York, realizing that this will result in a general attack in many states to lower the rates, are at Madison preparing evidence to refute the compilations of Attorney Drew. Members of the Merchants and Manufacturers' association of Milwaukee believe that the attack on the express rates will redound greater credit to the organization than any other problem it has yet wrestled with.

Not $10, But $5

Of course, there are people who will think that it pays to pay their Dentist $10 for a $5 job. But there are lots of others who have their eyes open.

My price of $5 for a gold crown is enough for any man to charge.

There are hundreds of Dentists in Wisconsin and Michigan who never ask but $5 for a gold crown.

In a few cities, the price is $10 because the Dentists there have gotten together and agreed among themselves to absolutely charge that price.

That's the situation in Janesville. My price is $5 for the best gold crown, and it is guaranteed equal in every respect to any crown made.

Associates of Late William Luedtke Who Was Killed Near Koshongong-Kanong Have Heroic Version of Tragedy.

According to the men who had been working with him near Koshongong station, C. & N. W. Railroad Foreman William Luedtke who was run down by the Chicago and Watertown passenger train Thursday afternoon, deliberately placed his own life in peril in order to prevent a possible derailment of the train. The approach of the passenger train had been left on the right of way some distance from where he was standing at the time and he ran thither to jerk it out of the way and prevent the locomotive wheels from coming in contact with it. Residents of Jefferson, his former home, and Ft. Atkinson may take steps to call the attention of the Carnegie Hero Fund Commission to the matter.

BRIBE TALE IS ASSAILED

WITNESSES ARE HEARD IN ATTACK ON REPRESENTATIVE WHITE'S STORY.

BROWNE'S DEFENSE IS BEGUN

Court Refuses to Take Bribery Case Out of Jury's Hands—Labor Leaders Give Evidence Against Minority Leader's Accuser.

Chicago, June 21.—The defense in the trial of Leo O'Neill Browne, charged with giving bribes to Illinois legislators for their votes for Senator William Lorimer, put their first witnesses on the stand to refute the story of Representative Charles A. White. A formal motion to take the case from the jury and instruct it to return a verdict of not guilty was overruled by the court, as was a motion to strike from the evidence portions of testimony which constitute the very basis of the trial. Charles A. White was recalled for further cross-examination for a short time.

Labor Leaders Brought Into Case.

It became apparent that labor leaders are to be brought into the trial. Judge McDuffy issued subpoenas for the three members of the legislative committee of the Chicago Federation of Labor who were delegated to attend the sessions of the last legislature. In addition to this two of the leading witnesses were labor men—George F. Gloss, a motorman, and George Doyle, inspector of engines for the Wabash railroad and a member of the International Association of Machinists.

A testimony had to do with certain alleged conversations he had had with White, when, it is claimed, White talked of the prospective election of William Lorimer to the United States senate. Doyle testified as to several conversations he is declared to have had with White in Springfield shortly prior to the election of Lorimer.

White Makes Denial.

White, on cross-examination, denied having told Gloss that he was going to vote for Lorimer because the senator was a friend of the street car men and also that he told Gloss that Lorimer was going to get him a "fat job" after his election.

William Russell of the machinists' union testified that White had told him during a conversation that "these fellows" would have to "come across good and plenty" and that he would be "flying high" before long.

Tells of White's Remarks.

Gloss on the stand admitted that in a conversation with White the latter had told him he intended to vote for Lorimer because he was a friend of the street car men. Later, Gloss testified that White said to him: "My name was away down in the list during the voting and when it came my turn I was undecided as to what to do, so I just called out 'Lorimer!' and let it go at that."

Doyle, who was a labor lobbyist at Springfield, testified that in a conversation White had said to him:

"You are the tightest bunch I ever saw. What do you think we fellows are going to live on—wind?"

The witness said that White impressed him as a man who would take a bribe.

Miss Woods Testifies.

Kathryn Woods of East St. Louis, the woman who had been often seen in the company of Representative White, was called to the stand. She testified that White had told her that he "was after the Lorimer bunch," and that he had already spent $2,000 as a member of the legislature, "and would get it all back and considerable more after my story of the Illinois legislature is printed."

Miss Woods also testified that she changed several railroad passes for White.

She further stated that White had told her that he had many influential friends in Chicago and that after the story concerning Lorimer and Browne would become public White intended to leave for Europe.

Senate Passes Probe Resolution.

Washington, June 21.—The resolution providing for an investigation of the alleged bribery charges and corrupt practices of the Illinois legislature in connection with the election of Senator Lorimer was reported to the senate from the committee on contingent fund and adopted.

Senator Borah of Idaho sought in vain to amend the resolution so as to provide that the investigation shall begin at once. It is not expected that the subcommittee which is to conduct the inquiry will begin its work until early next fall.

Robbed in Garb of Minister.

Bloomfield, N. J., June 21.—The police of this town are looking for a youthful polite highwayman, well dressed and little more than 17 years old. Three reports of holdup in different sections of the town reached the police station inside of an hour. The highwayman dresses in clerical black, his coat being of the Prince Albert style, while his white gloves give him a ministerial air.

Boats Collide; Eight Die.

Holyhead, June 21.—Rammed by the steamer Yewa and cut almost in half, the steamer La Rochelle sank within five minutes of the collision, carrying the captain and eight men to death in the English channel. The collision came in a dense fog.

KELLNER GIRL'S SLAYER HELD IN HOUSTON JAIL

Governor of Texas Is Asked for Requisition for Kentucky Fugitive.

Houston, Tex., June 21.—Joseph Wendling, charged with the murder of little Alma Kellner at Louisville, Ky., is being held by the police here pending the arrival of requisition papers from the governor of Kentucky.

Rewards aggregating $10,000 are standing for Wendling's capture.

The capture of Wendling, who formerly was employed as the janitor of St. John's church in Louisville, where the Kellner girl was murdered, was brought about by private detectives employed by the uncle of the girl.

Wendling led the slayings a merry chase, reaching from the Canadian border to the Mexican line. At one time he was about to cross the Mexican border at Laredo, but for some reason turned back and made for this city, where his capture was effected.

Wendling was not booked at the county jail, where he is being held.

Requisition papers for Wendling's return probably will be issued today.

Louisville, Ky., June 21.—The grand jury indicted Joseph Wendling on the charge of murdering Alma Kellner, and Governor Willson has issued the requisition.

TALK OVER CITY MANAGEMENT.

Indiana Municipal League Holds Annual Session at Richmond.

Richmond, Ind., June 21.—Most of the cities and towns in the state were represented by delegates in the council chamber this afternoon when President Joseph T. McNary of Logansport called to order the Municipal League of Indiana for its twentieth annual session. After the invocation and a song in which the delegates and the audience joined, Mayor W. W. Zimmerman welcomed the league on behalf of Richmond. J. Fred France, ex-mayor of Huntington, responded, and the convention then got down to business. The address of the afternoon was by Mayor Milo Freighnor of Huntington, on "How School Boards Should Be Elected."

This evening paper will be read by Mayor Knotts of Gary, and Mrs. M. F. Johnston, William Dudley Foulke, Ellwood Morris, Watson P. O'Neal and W. A. Bond, all of Richmond. The social event of the meeting, which will last until Thursday afternoon, will be a banquet tomorrow evening given to all visiting delegates by the Richmond Commercial club. At noon tomorrow the Richmond fire department will give a trial run and display.

DENIES KIN GEORGE IS TOPER

British Sovereign Has 'Champion in the Dean of Norwich.'

London, June 21.—King George V. has a champion in the dean of Norwich. He is, said the dean in an address, "a man to my personal knowledge, of intense self-sacrifice and high character."

The dean mentioned "two accusations brought, as I think, by that part of society which is no society at all, firstly, that the king is sometimes a man of inebriety. You may take me on undoubted authority that is a libel."

"The other accusation," added the dean, "is still more unworthy. It is that prior to his marriage to the present queen he had what is called a secret, or morganatic, marriage, with children by it. That is absolutely, root and branch, an untruth."

EXPLOSION TRAPS 35 MINERS.

Rescue Parties Driven Back by Gas Flames—Mine on Fire.

Hallfax, N. S., June 21.—Thirty-five miners were entombed by an explosion in the mines of the Maritime Coal & Power company. The mine is now on fire and rescue parties have been driven back by gas flames.

Giant Negro Humbled.

Pittsburg, Pa., June 21.—Charles Washington, a seven-foot negro, threatened to clean out a police court here. Lieut. Thomas Carroll, who is but five feet and a half, placed a chair behind the negro, climbed upon it and felled him with a "black-jack."

Ten Lost in Steamer Collision.

Holyhead, Wales, June 21.—The French freight steamer La Rochelle, from Bordeaux for Liverpool, was sunk in a collision with the British freighter Yewa off Skerries, Ireland. Ten members of the French vessel's crew were drowned.

WHAT IS ITCH DIRT?

It is the old Anglo-Saxon name for dandruff, and it's a good one. If you have dandruff you have itchy dirt, and the little microbes that are part and parcel of dandruff, are working persistently night and day, and sooner or later will reach the very life of your hair and destroy its vitality.

Then you'll be bald—bald to stay—for not even the wonderful rejuvenating power of Parisian Sage can grow hair after the hair bulb or root is dead. Parisian Sage cures dandruff. The People's Drug Co. sell it, recommending it, and guarantee it, only 50 cents a large bottle and your money back if it fails to cure dandruff, falling hair and itching of the scalp. If you do not live near The People's Drug Co. who sell Parisian Sage, the American makers, the Groux Mfg. Co., Buffalo, N. Y., will send you a bottle for 50 cents, all charges prepaid. There is no hair restorer so good—accept no substitute. The girl with Auburn hair is on every bottle.

WOMAN'S PAGE

The Evening Chit-Chat

By RUTH CAMERON

IT COSTS so much more to be well dressed than it used to," is the perpetual cry of all the women who make any pretensions to smartness. And, "It costs so much more to be even pretentiously dressed than it used to," is the wail of their less pretentious sisters.

And both are decidedly inclined to blame this sad state of affairs upon the high prices prevailing everywhere.

But does all the blame belong there?

For myself, I do not think so.

It seems to me that the reason we spend so much more money upon our clothes than we did ten years ago, and are still no better dressed, is largely a matter of ridiculously inflated standards.

What do I mean?

Well, let me tell you a little personal experience of my own wardrobe to illustrate.

Some years ago a friend of mine had a pretty black and white check silk for a summer afternoon and drowsy house gown. I always admired it immensely and this year decided to have one myself.

I confided as much to my dressmaker.

"But will it be drowsy enough for what you want?" she asked.

I thought the question absurd at the time, but since then I have seen so many women bound on informal calls or shopping expeditions, wearing blue and white or black and white check silks that I have been forced to realize that the gown I planned, under the present style conditions, is proper for a general utility dress, but absolutely impossible for a drowsy gown.

Now, that little incident seems to me to epitomize the reason why it costs so much more to be well dressed than it used to.

It isn't that black and white check silk costs much more than it did ten years ago. It is just because the black and white check silk gown that used to be a rather drowsy gown, suitable for afternoon functions, has now descended to the rank of general utility and street wear gown.

To fill its place as afternoon gown, something proportionately above it in expense and elaborateness must, of course, be substituted, and in order to maintain its rank as the dressiest dress of all, the evening gown must also become correspondingly more elaborate and expensive.

Do you remember how dressed up you used to feel in your best white waist five or six years ago? It was a dainty little affair, unembroidered, and lace trimmed, and when you wore it you felt that you could go to a swell afternoon tea or dine at a high-class restaurant without looking at all dowdy.

Today in that same waist you would not feel at all dressed up. You put it on for an informal call or a shopping excursion, but you would feel very much underdressed if you wore it to a formal function or to dine at the dressy restaurant.

A woman who knows the question of clothes from A-Z writes in a recent magazine about comparative values in much the same vein:

"One may today in Paris buy the identical waists that were for sale ten years ago, at the identical prices; but with the change in fashion has come a corresponding change in the uses to which the same garment is put. The thirty or forty-dollar waists of that period would be very pretty today, but one would wear them now where the eight-dollar waists were worn before, in order to be dressed at about the same degree of smartness."

That seems to me to be the crux of the very high cost of dressing well that we complain of today.

Not that materials or workmanship are so much more expensive, but simply that we have moved all our standards up one peg.

Will they go up a peg more in the next decade?

Will we soon wear fragile flingerie waists in the morning and to business, and take the chiffon and embroidery for simple afternoon gowns?

And if we do, what will be left for our very best evening dresses?

And how long are we going to keep up this absurd quickening of the pace?

Seems to me there are a few pretty good questions for home and club discussion among women.

Over a short, fitted bodice hangs the little apron tunic and this little apron tunic is modified bib fashion over the bodice. The bodice is also extremely simple, being held in half-inch tucks all around and having a rounded out neck and short, loose sleeves, both trimmed with a soutache braided pattern. The soutache is pink like the gingham, and the braiding outlines belt and overskirt, and adds a pretty touch on the sheer white mull guilpe.

MAIL STAGGERS EX-PRESIDENT

ROOSEVELT OVERWHELMED BY THOUSANDS OF LETTERS

Colonel Says It Would Be Act of Kindness for Well-Disposed Strangers to Cease Writing or Telegraphing to Him.

New York, June 21.—The avalanche of letters and telegrams awaiting Col. Theodore Roosevelt at Oyster Bay and in his office with the Outlook has fairly overwhelmed the returned hunter.

Thousands of letters have accumulated and more are arriving daily. Many of them are friendly greetings, more contain political advice and not a few are from old friends with whom the colonel has been corresponding.

It may interest the writers to know that the great mass of this correspondence will never reach Roosevelt's eyes. Some of it may be seen by persons employed to look after it, but it is not really believed that all the letters will be read.

"I would be glad if you make it known," said the colonel to the newspaper men, "that the volume of correspondence is so great that I cannot give it my personal attention. It will be a kindness for well disposed strangers to refrain from writing me or sending me telegrams.

No Appropriation for Him.

"An ex-president has no secretary nor any appropriation for the hiring of stenographers and typewriters, such no may be required to deal with this great volume of mail. Those outside letters simply swamp important matters which should receive my personal attention.

"I am sure that my friends who have received no replies, or disappointing replies, to their communications, will know that it is because they have not come to my attention."

During the 17 days between March 4, 1909, and the date of his sailing for Africa, he received more than 7,000 letters. Mrs. Roosevelt and members of his family helped him open and sort this mail matter, but it was impossible to consider the letters individually. While in London the ex-president received some 10,000 letters.

The COURAGE of CAPTAIN PLUM

By JAMES OLIVER CURWOOD.

ILLUSTRATIONS BY MAGNUS KETNER.

COPYRIGHT 1909 BY JAMES OLIVER CURWOOD.

He shivered with quiet laughter and dived into a great block of darkness where there seemed to be no houses, keeping close beside Nathaniel. Soon they came to the edge of a grove and deep among the trees Captain Plum caught a glimpse of a lighted window. Obadiah Price now began to exhibit unusual caution. He approached the light slowly, pausing every few steps to peer guardedly about him, and when they had come very near to the window he pulled his companion behind a thick clump of shrubbery. Nathaniel could hear the old man's subdued chuckle and he bent his head to catch what he was about to whisper to him.

"You must make no noise, Nat," he warned. "This is the castle of our priest, king and prophet—James Jesse Strang. I am going to show you what you have never seen before and what you will never look upon again. I have sworn upon the Two Books and I will keep my oath. And then—you will answer the question I asked you back there."

He crept out into the darkness of the trees and Nathaniel followed, his heart throbbing with excitement, every sense alert, and one hand resting on the butt of his pistol. He felt that he was nearing the climax of his day's adventure and now, in the last moment of it, his old caution reasserted itself. He knew that he was among a dangerous people, men who, according to the laws of his country, were criminals in more ways than one. He had seen much of their work along the coast and he had heard of more of it. He knew that this gloom and sullen quiet of St. James had cut-throats and pirates and thieves. Still there was nothing ahead to alarm him. The old man dodged the gleams of the lighted window and slunk around to the end of the great house. Here, several feet above his head, was another window, small and veiled with the foliage of a vine that clung in dense masses to the log wall. With the assurance of one who had been there before the counselor mounted some object under the window, lifted himself until his chin was on a level with the glass, and peered within.

He was there but an instant and then fell back, chuckling and rubbing his hands.

"Come, Nat!"

He stood a little to one side and bowed with mock politeness. For a moment Captain Plum hesitated. Under ordinary circumstances this spying through a window would have been repugnant to him. But at present something seemed to tell him that it was not to satisfy his curiosity alone that Obadiah Price had given him this opportunity. Would a look through that little window explain some of the mysteries of the night?

There came a low whisper in his ear.

"Do you smell lilac, Nat? Eh?"

The counselor was grinning at him. There was a suggestive gleam in his eyes. He rubbed his hands almost fiercely.

In another instant Captain Plum had stepped upon the object beneath the window and parted the leaves. Brontially he looked in. A strange scene met his eyes. He was looking into a vast room, illuminated by a huge hanging lamp suspended almost on a level with his head. Under this lamp there was a long table and at the table sat seven women and one man. The man was at the end nearest the window and all that Nat could see was the back of his head and shoulders. But the women were in full view, three on each side of the table and one at the far end. He guessed the man to be Strang; but he stared at the women and as his eyes traveled back to the one facing him at the end of the table he could scarcely repress the exclamation of surprise that rose to his lips. It was the girl whom he had encountered at the counselor's cabin. She was leaning forward as if in an agony of suspense, her eyes on the king, her lips parted, her hands clutching at a great book which lay open before her. Her cheeks were flushed with excitement. And even as he looked Captain Plum saw her head fall suddenly forward upon the table, enfolded by her arms. The heavy braids of her hair, partly undone, glistened like gold in the lamplight. Her slender body was convulsed with sobs. The woman nearest her reached over and laid a caressing hand on the bowed head, but drew it quickly away as if at a sharp command.

In his eagerness Nathaniel thrust his face through the foliage until his nose touched the glass. When the girl lifted her head she straightened back in her chair—and saw him. There came a sudden white fear in her face, a parting of the lips as if she were on the point of crying out, and then, before the others had seen, she looked again at Strang. She had discovered him and yet she had not revealed her discovery! Nathaniel could have shouted for joy. She had seen him, had recognized him! And because she had not cried out and wanted him! He drew his pistol from its holster and waited. If she signaled for him, if she called him, he would burst the window. The girl was talking now and as she talked she lifted her eyes. Nathaniel pressed his face close against the window, and smiled. That would let her know he was a friend. She seemed to answer him with a little nod and he fancied that her eyes glowed with a mute appeal for his assistance. But only for an instant, and then they turned again to the king. Not until that moment did Nathaniel notice upon her bosom a bunch of crumpled lilacs.

From below the iron grip of the counselor dragged him down.

"That's enough," he whispered. "That's enough—for tonight." He saw the pistol in Nathaniel's hand and gave a sudden breathless cry.

"Nat—Nat!"

He caught Captain Plum's free hand in his.

"Tell me this, Obadiah Price," whispered the master of the Typhoon, "who is she?"

The counselor stood on tiptoe to answer.

"They are the wives of Strang, Nat!"

"But the other?" demanded Nathaniel. The other—

"O, to be sure, to be sure," chuckled Obadiah. "The girl of the lilacs, eh? Why, she's the seventh wife, Nat—that's all, the seventh wife!"

CHAPTER III.

The Warning.

So quickly that Obadiah Price might not have counted ten before it had come and gone the significance of his new situation flashed upon Captain Plum as he stood under the king's window. His plans had changed since leaving ship but now he realized that they had become hopelessly involved. He had intended that Obadiah should show him where Strang was to be found, and that later, when ostensibly returning to his vessel, he would visit the prophet in his home. Whatever the interview brought forth he would still be in a position to deliver the counselor's package. Even an hour's bombardment of St. James would not interfere with the fulfillment of his oath. But those few minutes at the king's window had been fatal to the scheme he had built. The girl had seen him. She had not betrayed his presence. She had called to him with her eyes—he would have staked his life on that. What did it all mean? He turned to Obadiah. The old man was grinning and twisting his hands nervously. He seemed half afraid, cringing, as if fearing a blow. The sight of him set Nathaniel's blood afire. His white face seemed to verify the terrible thought that had leaped into his brain. Suddenly he heard a faint cry—a woman's voice—and in an instant he was back at the window. The girl had risen to her feet and stood facing him. This time, as her eyes met his own, he saw in them a flashing warning, and he obeyed it as if she had spoken to him. As he dropped silently back to the ground the counselor came close to his side.

"That's enough for tonight, Nat," he whispered.

He made as if to slip away but Nathaniel detained him with an emphatic hand.

"Not yet, dad! I'd like to have a word with this—"

"With Strang's wife," chuckled Obadiah. "Ho, ho, ho, Nat, you're a rascal!" The old man's face was mapped with wrinkles, his eyes glowed with joyous approbation. "You shall, Nat, you shall! You love a pretty face, eh? You shall meet Mrs. Strang, Nat, and you shall make love to her if you wish. I swear that, too. But not tonight, Nat—not tonight!"

He stood a pace away and rubbed his hands.

"There will be no chance tonight, Nat—but tomorrow night, or the next. O, I promise you shall meet her, and make love to her, Nat! Ho, if Strang knew, if Strang only knew!"

There was something so fiendishly gleaming in the counselor's attitude, in his face, in the low glow of his eyes, that for a moment Nathaniel's involuntary liking for the little old man before him turned to abhorrence. The passion, the triumph of the man, convinced him where words had failed. The girl was Strang's wife. His last doubt was dispelled. And because she was Strang's wife Obadiah hated the Mormon prophet. The counselor had spoken with faithful assurance—that he should meet her, that he should make love to her. It was an assurance that made him shudder. As he followed in silence up out of the gloom of the town he strove, but in vain, to find whether sin had lurked in the sweet face that had appealed to him in its misery—whether there had been a flash of something besides terror, besides prayerful entreaty, in the lovely eyes that had met his own. Obadiah spoke no word to break in on his thoughts. Now and then the old man's insane chuckles floated softly to Nathaniel's ears, and when at last they came to the cabin in the forest he broke into a low laugh that echoed weirdly in the great black room which they entered. He lighted another candle and approached a ladder which led through a trap in the ceiling. Without a word he mounted this ladder, and Nathaniel followed him, finding himself a moment later in a small low room furnished with a bed. The counselor placed his candle on a table close beside it and rubbed his hands until it seemed they must burn.

"You will stay—oh, Nat?" he cried, bobbing his head. "Yes, you will stay, and you will give me back the package for a day or two." He retreated to the trap and slid down it as quickly as a rat. "Pleasant dreams to you, Nat, and—O, wait a minute!" Captain Plum could hear him pattering quickly over the floor below. In a moment he was back, thrusting his white grimacing face through the trap and tossed something upon the bed. "She left them last night, Nat. Pleasant dreams, pleasant dreams," and he was gone.

Nathaniel turned to the bed and picked up a faded bunch of lilacs. Then he sat down, loaded his pipe, and smoked until he could hardly see the walls of his little room. From the moment of his landing on the island he turned the events of the day over in his mind. Yet when he arrived at the end of them he was no less mystified than when he began. Who was Obadiah Price? Who was the girl that fate had so mysteriously associated with his movements thus far? What was the plot in which he had accidentally become involved? With tireless tenacity he hung to these questions for hours. That there was a plot of some kind he had not the least doubt. The counselor's strange actions, the oath, the package, and above all the scene in the king's house convinced him of that. And he was sure that Obadiah's night visitor—the girl with the lilacs—was playing a vital part in it.

He plucked at the withered flowers which the old man had thrown him. He could detect their sweet scent above the pungent fumes of tobacco and as Obadiah's triumphant chuckle recurred to him, the glowing joy in his eyes, the passionate tremble of his voice, a grim smile passed over his face. The mystery was easy of solution—if he was willing to reason along certain lines. But he was not willing. He had formed his own picture of Strang's wife and it pleased him to keep it. At moments he half convinced himself a fool, but that did not trouble him. The longer he smoked the more his old confidence and his old recklessness returned to him. He had enjoyed his adventure. The next day he would end it. He would go openly into St. James and have done his business with Strang. Then he would return to his ship. What had he, Captain Plum, to do with Strang's wife?

But even after he had determined on these things his brain refused to rest. He paced back and forth across the narrow room, thinking of the man whom he was to meet tomorrow—of Strang, the one-time schoolmaster and temperance lecturer who had made himself a king, who for seven years had defied the state and nation, and who had made of his island stronghold a hot-bed of polygamy, of licentiousness, of dissolute power. His blood grew hot as he thought again of the beautiful girl who had appealed to him. Obadiah had said that she was the king's wife.

Thoughts flashed into his head which for a time made him forget his mission on the island. In spite of his resolution to keep to his own scheme he found himself, after a little, thinking only of the Mormon king, and the lovely face he had seen through the castle window. He knew much about the man with whom he was to deal tomorrow. He knew that he had been a rival of Brigham Young and that when the exodus of the Mormons to the deserts of the west came he had led his own followers into the north, and that each July, amid barbaric festivities, he was recognized with a circlet of gold. But the girl! If she was the king's wife why had her eyes called to him for help?

One May Overcome
constipation permanently by proper personal co-operation with the beneficial effects of Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna, when required. The forming of regular habits is most important and while endeavoring to form them the assistance of Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna is most valuable, as it is the only laxative which acts without disturbing the natural functions and without debilitating and it is the one laxative which leaves the internal organs in a naturally healthy condition, thereby really aiding one in that way. To get its beneficial effects, buy the genuine manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. only, and for sale by all leading druggists. Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna is never classed by the well-informed with medicines which make extravagant and unfounded claims to cure habitual constipation without personal co-operation.

Correcting an Error.
It was a minister's small son, whose habit was to ask God to bless each member of the family after his prayer. Having been put to bed one night in a hurry, he forgot one of them. Kneeling again with hands clasped and eyes closed, he addressed the Lord, thus: "Oh, Lord, wouldn't that kill you? I forgot grandma! God bless grandma. Amen."—Delineator.

Great Wisconsin Land Opening
150,000 Acres in Sawyer County, Wisconsin, Released for Settlement.

$5.50 to $20 Per Acre and Easy Terms.

Yielding to the urgent and increasing demand of homebuilders, the lumber interests have at last released for settlement an enormous acreage of rich undeveloped land in the heart of Wisconsin's great dairy and big crop-producing section. The American Lumbering Company of Chicago, Wis., has secured this great body of land and is offering remarkable inducements to settlers and investors. The land is equal in productive power to land that commands $100 to $150 per acre in Iowa, Illinois, Indiana or Ohio. The company is selling of this land at the remarkably low valuation of $5.50 to $20 per acre.

The terms are one-fourth to one-third cash and the balance in ten years.

This is an opportunity unparalleled in recent years. A man with a few hundred dollars and a determination to win can get one of these splendid farms and be independent in a few years. There is timber to be cleared away, but much of it is valuable hardwood, which can be turned into money at the nearby sawmills.

The timber can thus be made to pay for the land and provide lumber for farm buildings and fences.

Settlers in the Round Lake Country have the advantage of good markets, railroad facilities, telephone, mail and service, schools, churches and good neighbors. It is a country of abundant rainfall and the perfect soil.

Hundreds are headed for the Round Lake Country, Sawyer County, determined to get a fresh start in a new country, where every man has a "great" four opportunity.

Free books, maps and full information regarding the great development plans now under way, can be secured by addressing the local representative of the American Lumbering Company.
